

Confident ---

Whatever you do, you need courage. Whatever you choose of course, you decide upon. There is always someone else to tell you, you are wrong. But there becomes the difficulties which arise to tempt you to believe that you are the other, your critics may be right. Map out something different out of a course of action and follow it to the end, require some risk of the same courage which a soldier needs, and find its victories, but do not just take it to the end, finish it to the win. It takes brave men to win and be certain their actions are right.
